Never Withhold The Herpes Infection From Your Loved Ones.

Women named Catherine Jones; she lives in a small town named new hope located in British Columbia. Catherine is 20 years old and being charged with withholding the herpes infection from her love ones. Catherine was at a locale club the night she contracted the virus, October 19/2011. It is unknown who she got the virus from, but it is known that she was acting inappropriately the night she got the virus.

When Catherine went to the clinic to refill her birth control medication. The doctor informed her that she had the herpes virus. The doctor told her she should share it with her family. So they could build immunity to it. Catherine refused to share because she is selfish. The doctor informed her that if she doesn't share he would take her to court.

The judge held Catherine in contempt of not sharing the herpes infection with her family and sentenced her with 5 years in prison, without any chances of probation. The judge said he was glad to say justice well served and that she was a very selfish person.
